IT IS HARD TO FIND A FRIEND WHO IS ACCOM-

MODATING-THE PUSHING WOMAN IN SOCIETY. A girl who has no legitimate protector, no mother sister to chaperon her, is a waif and a stray in e social world. Her friends are fond of her, of rse, but few women of the world are willing to in loco parentis to a girl at a dance; and many a young woman gives up going, rather than ask such an apparently simple service, even of an intimate friend.

"It is really not worth the struggle," exclaimed a metherless girl the other day, apropos of a ball to which all her close acquaintances were going, and which in kindlier circumstances she would have greatly enjoyed. "First there is the chaperon, then man to start off with, then the supper, and then cotillon-a matron and three men to conside every ball, besides the gown and other accessories! It is too much! And yet I dearly love to go. and it seems too had that I should be so terribly handlcapped! Day before yesterday an old friend ther's sent me an invitation to the assem with a note explaining low glad she would be to take charge of me, but this and that and the other prevented, etc. Reading between the lines, I rly what it all meant. She was pleased to ne the invitation, but did not want to be bothered with me, and sought to forestall my possible st to be matronized. 'Well,' I thought, 'I may well take it, and see what can be done."

Again I was told to move on, in language velled ed, and feeling as if I were a pariah, I met with a good Samaritan. A friend of my own age eximed with enthusiasm: 'What, have you an invitation? How delightful! We will go there together. Mamma has already promised to chap-eron six girls, so another won't count. No, I have partner for cotillon or supper, but I never worry. There are always plenty of men around; and mamma has any number of old friends always ready to oblige her.' So I went, and I danced, and I enjoye myself hugely; but Mrs. M., with her kind heart, is indeed like the shadow of a mighty rock within a weary land, and I doubt if there are half a dozen such shelters for motherless girls in the whole city of New-York."

Many Englishmen bring letters to them. Your visiting Englishman, by-the-way, is a simple soul when he first comes over, not knowing who is who at all and not caring much, since he thinks of us all as only Americans. The guest of honor at this particular dinner was Sir George Blackle, a young baronet of large fortune—one of those fresh, lovely, well-groomed Englishmen, with only average brains, the face of an Adonis and the figure of an athlete. You people are awfully kind to a fellow. Sir George said to me. I never in my life had so many invitations. To-night I have on a dinner, the opera, a supper and a dance, and I don't know one of the people who have asked me. "But are you going?" I mquired, wondering to what queer places he might be bidden, and naturally anxious he should be taught that thete are 'people and people,' even in America. Why, of course,' he answered, with British candor, I want to see as many varieties of the natives as possible." "Do you mean to say,' I exclaimed, 'that people

"Do you mean to say," I exclaimed, that people just send you invitations, without any acquaint-ance at all? 'Yes,' he replied, 'that is what I think is so kind. Now, I have a card in my pocket for Mrs. Clymber's box at the opera, and I, am going on there from here.

"I, too, was going to the opera with old Mrs. Van Amsterdam, who, as she surveyed the house through her glasses, remarked: "There's that new Englishman the women are all raving about, in that little Mrs. Clymber's box. I wonder how she got him" I felt that I was showing true Christian charity when I refrained from enlightening the old lady. But then I really liked Mrs. Clymber, and had partaken of her salt only the week be-fore."

ATHLETIC YOUNG WOMEN.

ATHLETIC YOUNG WOMEN.

The modern athletic girl, handsome, high-spirited and attractive, is so fond of outdoor pursuits and pleasures that balls and dances have become comparatively stupld to her. "I find girls silly," shexclaims, with fine scorn, "and, as for the men who paratively stupid to held and as for the men who frequent these places, the term 'dancing mea' just suits them." 'Did you have a good time, Mary?" asked a friend, in response to such a remark. 'I asked a friend, in response to such a remark. 'I is suppose so," was the answer. 'I had a number of invitations for the cotilion, and plenty of favore, but, somehow, it does not amuse me. There must be something wanting about my make-up. As for talking their baliroom chatter, I simply cannot do it. It sounds too silly for words.

The "gisgling spir" and the "dancing man" are going out of fashion, hand in hand. And, though the man of the world may occasionally take a hand in baliroom functions, he is generally bored thereby. 'The reason why debutantles are so uninteresting," said a society man, recently, "is that they mould themselves on one type and suppress their individuality. 'Look interested and amused,' says mamma, as a last injunction, and the consequence is an ifevitable nervous giggle accompanying each remark. I know a couple of girls who have just come out, and the only difference I can see between them is that Miss Smith says. 'Hehe he how do you do, Mr. Brown; he-he-he.'

PAPER VESTS FOR WARMTH.

A young lady whose slight figure shows to great advantage in a tightly fitting cloth costume has borrowed from the wisdom of the poor in adopting a newspaper vest under the bodice, instead of one of chamois skin. She likes it much better. It is fully as warm, and may be new each time that it is worn. Foor people know that one thickness of newspaper, basted between two pieces of calleo. newspaper, basted between two pieces of calleo, furnishes a blanket almost as warm as a cotton quilt. "I am sure that newspapers saved my life," said a gentleman who had been caught in a Northwestern blizzard. "Much to the amusement of my fellow-travellers, I got a number of papers from a newsboy, and tied them around my legs cowboy-fashion. Then, making a hole in a couple of sheets, I put my head through it, and tied the papers at the waist. Thus I escaped a violent cold. Some of those who laughed at me tardily concluded to follow my example." A physician whose practice takes him all over a large, thinly settled district invariably wears under his topcoat a waistcoat made of newspapers. He says it is as warm as a cardigan or sweater, and far less bulky. Carpets lined with newspapers are particularly warm. In a country house where a small northern bedroom is built over a veranda, and is thus greatly exposed, the clever mistress of the mansion lined the floor and walls with newspapers, covering the former with a thick carpet and the latter with a pretty, cheap chintz, and the difference in the temperature of the room and the comfort of the occupant were apparent at once. All the joints and cracks were thus thoroughly protected with an airtight covering.

BIOGRAPHY OF "AUNT SUSAN."

Mrs. Ida A. Hawper, who is to write the biography of Susan B. Anthony, is a well-known journalist of ability, having been connected with the most prominent Western newspapers. For some time she was managing editor of "The Terre Haute Daily News," besides doing all the paper's political writing. For several years she conducted a department in "The Saturday Evening Mail," besides being a travelling correspondent of "The Chicago Times," "Cleve-land Leader," "Detroit Free Press" and 'Indianap-olls Journal." Mrs. Harper read several papers before the World's Fair congresses, has been State secretary of the Indiana Suffrage Association, and did admirable service as chairman of presswork during the campaign for the suffrage amendment in California. It is expected that the writing of the blography will occupy one year, during which time Mrs. Harper will remain in Rochester and do her work under the supervision of Miss Anthony.

FLOWERS MADE OF BREAD.

THEIR CHIEF MERIT IS THAT THEY FADE JUST A LITTLE IN A HOT ROOM,

LIKE REAL ONES. The latest method of making artifid at flowers is from fresh bakers' bread. The mates lals required are wire, bread, coloring matter and knowledge of the process, now familiar to only a, few persons, The factory, the ordy one at present, is in the West End of London, and employs about one hundred expert hands. According to a well-known importer of artificial flowers, this not el method is likely to supersede all others so far as flowers to be worn on the corsage are concerned. Not only do ticle when freshly made, but an the bread grows stale the flowers assume a slightly withered apstale the flowers assume a slightly withered appearance, which is almost identical with that of a natural flower beginning to fade. Of course, this faded appearance never becomes very marked, being just sufficient to overcome the unna turally bright and fresh appearance which is so of jectionable in the ordinary artificial flower after being in the heated atmosphere of a ballroom for several hours. The fading power of "bread" flowers, practically insures them against detection, even by the eyes of an expert.

SUGGESTIONS FOR VALENTIME'S'DAY. Either write "G. M. V." or "Good Mbrrow, Valentine," on every missive sent on St. V:dentine's Day, The expression comes from Shakespeare's lines in 'Hamlet," Act IV, Scene V:

Good morrow, 'tis Saint Valentine's Day,

Valentines from the stores do very well, but those contrived by friends have more of a personal touch, The verses in the "bought valentines," as the children call them, are too often flat or amitguous. Here are some selections that may be found useful:

Go, lovely rose!

Tell her that wastes her time and me
That now she knows.
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.

-(Waller.

Sing again, with your dear voice revealing A tone
Of some world far from ours.
Where music and mosnlight and feeling
Are one.

Given or returned. Common as light is love,
And its familiar voice wearies not ever.
They who inspire it most are fortunate.
As I am now; but those who feel it most
Are happier still.

(Shelley.

Oh, my love is like a red, red rose, That's newly sprung in June; Oh, my love is like the melodic That's sweetly played in tune.

My heart is given unto you O give yours unto me; We'll lock them up together And throw away the key.

THE TRUE PHILOSOPHER. From The Atlanta Constitution.

In winter time he's happy
When he's pelted by the snows;
In summer time he's singing
As he gathers up a rose.
And somehow earth is brighter
For the happy way he goes. If dark the tempest's frowning.
And no stars are in the night,
He thanks God for a shelter
And sleeps and dreams of light.
And somehow earth is brighter,
For he ever makes it bright.

And so in joy and sorrow
He goes his earthly way,
And trusts God for to-morrow
And does His will to-day.
And somehow earth is brighter
For that lesson, "Love—obey!"

NEWS ITEMS.

Miss Nora Maynard Green has issued cards for a musical at her studio, No. 420 Fifth-ave., for Tues-day evening. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moran, the artists, have placed their apartments at Miss Green's disposal, that she may have additional room to accommodate those who will wish to hear her pupils. Among those who are to sing are Mrs. E. Berry Wall, Mrs. George Gerry Boardman, Mrs. Charles Adams Coombs, Miss Olive L. Booth, Miss Elizabeth Winter and Miss Fannie Dunlap.

Seven women are to be received to-night at Christ Church, Brooklyn, into the sisterhood of which the Church, Brooklyn, into the sisterhood of which the rector, the Rev. James R. Darlington, is spiritual director. They will work in Christ Church Parish, under Dr. Darlington's guidance, visiting in the tenements and relieving distress wherever they find it. They will wear a costume consisting of a blue dress and a blue cape-coat. The order has no title but that of sisterhood, and its parent house is at Maspeth, though there are so few sisters and so much work to be done that they are seldom to be found at their headquarters. Some of those who will be received into it to-night are wealthy, and some are married.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

Society is completely absorbed in the Martin costhe ball given by Mrs. Astor in her old nome, Fith-ave, and Thirty-fourth-st, in honor of her only son, John Jacob Astor. Of Marie Antoinettes, Queen Elizabeths. Mary Queen of Scots, Cavallers, French, Spanish and Itafian noblemen, incroyables and marquises there will be no end. Many men and women in society declare they have not selected their costumes, and many of those who have made up their minds what they shall wear decline to confide even to their most intimate friends. The details of the ball, which are being handled by Mrs. Martin, have not yet been perfected, nor has the style of decoration or the leader of the cotilion been decided upon. Rehearsals for the quadrilles are held hearly every day, and the style of costumes and the color are discussed and changed almost every meeting. In Mrs. Astor's quadrilles Mrs. Martin, Mrs. T. Suffern Taller, Mrs. Suyvesan Fish, Frederic T. Martin, John Jacob Astor and Lispenard Siewart will take part. The quadrille arranged by Mrs. Edmund L. Bayles will be of the Louis XV period; it is said the costumes will be parti-colored. The dancers in this quadrille will be Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Ogden Mills, Miss Morton, Mrs. Henry I. Sloane, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbill, Jr. Miss Van Rensselaer, Miss Blight, Craig Wadsworth and Alfonso De Navarro, Mrs. Frederic Bronson's quadrille will be made up entirely of debutantes and young men. Preceding the ball several costume dinners will be riven. The details of these dinners have not yet been finished.

The week which closed last night was filled with dances and dinners. Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry's dance in their home, at Fifth-ave, and Sixty-first-st., on Monday night was naturally the important private dance of the week. In fact, it was a ball; very crowded, but, all the same, very enjoyable. The guests found the entertainment a enjoyable. The guests found the entertainment a most delightful one, as the house is of large and airy dimensions, and the conservatory proved a great attraction. It was a very late ball; the cotilion, which was led by Mr. Wadsworth and Mr. Baldwin, was not begun until about 1:30 o'clock, and after an elaborate supper, which was served in the dining-room and library. The cotilion favors were extremely pretty, they included sachets, white daisy feather fans and lyres on sticks, ornamented with flowers.

A smaller but most enjoyable dance was given on the same night by Mr. and Mrs. James A. Scrymser at their home, No. 107 East Twentyfirst-st. The cotilion, which was begun promptly a 19:30 o'clock, and lasted until midnight, was leby Alexander M. Hadden, who danced with Mis-Erving. The favors were knives, flags of all nations, pennants, golf balls and small Japanese articles. After the cotilion supper was served by Pinard. Among the guesis were Miss Marion Whiteker, Miss Post, Miss Elizabeth Delaheld, the Misses Gurnee, Miss Crocker, Miss Evelyn Sloane, Miss Du Pont, John Sloane, J. Langdon Erving, William North Duane, Francis C. Hentington and Mrs. Turnbull.

The Metropolitan Opera House on Monday nigh held one of the most brilliant audiences of the sea son. Mrs. Astor, in a gorgeous gown of black and silver brogade, sat in her box with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose gown was of a delicate shade of violet velvet, on the corsage of which were a number of diamond and sapphire ornaments. Mrs. Astor also were her diamond crown. A box to which many eyes were directed was occupied by Mrs. Bradley-Martin and Mrs Edmund L. Baylies. Mrs. Martin wore a gown of pale-blue brocade, the comage embellished with bows of rose-pink satin ribbon. Mrs. Martin also wore a tiara of diamonds, a necklace of solitaire and many diamond ornaments. Mrs. Edmund I. Baylles was in cerulean-blue satin, the corsage ornamented with red roses. In a box a short dis tance away was Mrs. William C. Whitney in black velvet, the front of the corsage festooned with single diamond star. Mrs. Orme Wilson was in a gown of pink silk and chiffon, Mrs. Levi P. Mor-Society is completely absorbed in the Martin costume hall. Costumes have been the chief topic of conversation since the date of the ball was set and the invitations to it sent out by Mrs. Martin. Much time is now spent by fashionable people, who are preparing for the entertainment, at the costumer's wigmaker's and dressmaker's, and in consulting rare works on costumes of olden times. Many people are using antique stuffs, and in some in stances old paintings have been followed in point of details. Some persons have openly discussed their costumes, while others have preferred to assume an air of profound mystery. Of the else their costumes to be worn at the ball there can be no question, for in many of the dresses there will be silks, satins and brocades, trimmed with the richest laces and gems. The hoxicss herself, according to the most trustworthy information, has yet to select her costume. Mrs. Astor, it is said, will appear in a gown of pansy-colored which was first displayed five or six years ago at the ball given by Mrs. Astor in her old home, Fifthave, and Thirty-fourth-st., in honor of her only son, John Jacob Astor. Of Marie Antoinettes, Queen Elizabeths, Mary Queen of Scots, Cavaliers, French, Spanish and Halfan noblemen, incroyables, French, Spanish and Halfan noblem ton, in dark ruby velvet, trimmed with lace, occu-day night at the Waldorf was, as usual, a very handsome ball, not overcrowded, well conducted other rooms were elaborate and most effective.

Elisha Dyer, jr., with Mrs. Bradley-Martin, led the cotilion after supper. The favors, which many of the women will find useful as well as ornamental, were voted a great success. As at the first Assembly of the season, the guests were received at the entrance to the ballroom by the Reception Committee, which was composed of Mrs. John W. Minturn. Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. John Christopher Wilmerding and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies.

Dinner parties were given last week by Mrs Astor, who has made arrangements to sail for Europe on the steamship St. Louis on February 17; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Lispenard Stew-art, whose guests were some of the most beautiful debutantes of the season, and Mrs. Minturn, whose guests also numbered several girls recently introduced to society. Among the guests were Miss Bronson, Miss Hunt, Miss Crocker, Miss Derby, Miss Lee, Harry Robbins, Alexis R. McHvaine, Henry Beekman, Mr. Post and Alexander M. Hadden. Dinner parties will be numerous this week. On Thursday night Mrs. Bronson will give a dinner dance and Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor. Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Iselin, pr. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Mrs. Henry Beadleston, of No. 32 West Thirty-sixth-st., will give two informal receptions on the afternoons of Tuesday, February 2 and 9. Miss Schuyler will entertain the members of the Thursday Evening Club at the next neeting on February 4, at her home, No. 125 East Twenty-first-st.

The Charity Ball, which will be held on Tuesday evening, in the Metropolitan Opera House, will be one of the most brilliant of the entertainments given in aid of the Nursery and Child's Hospital. Every detail for the ball has been settled, and the prospects are that it will not only be a brilliant ball, but a very large one. It is proposed to have the ball opened at 9:30 o'clock, with Mrs. William M. Kingsland and Chauncey M. Depew leading the grand march. With one or two exceptions every lox is sold, and some of the best of the single reserved seats are already spoken for. Lander's Band has been secured for the dancing, and the Navy Yard Brass Band, conducted by W. C. Boleschka, for the promenade music. The opening march will, as at previous Charity Balls, be joined in by many of the women managers and patrons of the Nur-sery and Child's Hospital. There will also be in the

FRESH TROUBLE FOR THEATRE GOERS.

THE TOWERING COIFFURE AS EFFECTIVE AS THE TALL HAT IN OBSTRUCTING THE VIEW.

Alderman Plotke may be compelled to introduce another ordinance in the City Council prohibiting women from indulging in high hairdressing at public places of amusement. Having disposed of the millinery monatrosity the Marie Antoinette style of hairdressing threatens to obstruct the view of the atre-goers.

The manager of a fashionable hairdressing establishment in State-st, said yesterday afternoon that this towering style of coffure, so popular in Paris at present, had aiready struck the fancy of Chicago fashionables. The hairdresser, speaking of the new colffure, yesterday said:

"Yes, there has been a boom in our business since the high-hat agitation. Most of the women said they were going to the theatre and insisted, since they felt compelled to remove their headgear, even before the ordinance was signed by the Mayor, upon having their hair arranged in some elaborate style.

"One woman who likes the Marie Antoinette style. From The Chicago Record.

before the ordinant arranged in some elaborate style.

One woman who likes the Marie Antoinette style had her hair pompadoured and surmounted with such a collection of high puffs and side curls that she must have obstructed the view more than had she worn a theatre bonnet. This woman had an aignette on top and a sort of a windmill bow of ribbon on the side of her hair.

If attribute the prevalence of beautiful hairdressing to the hat agrication. If a woman has to take off her hat she likes to have her hair prettily arranged in coils or puffs, for she knows it will appear to much better advantage at the theatre than at a party, where one is moving about.

The women who are not inclined to the towering style of coffirm evince a liking for an elaborate style of some sort. The Madonna style is rapidly becoming passe, and in its place are the flat coils and braids intended to display the quantity of hair.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION. The president of the Minneapolis Board of Education is a woman, Mrs. Jennie C. Crays, and her election to that position raises an interesting question of law. The person occupying it is by law an ex-officio member of the Library Board and the Tax Levy Board. It is claimed that only men are eligible for membership in the latter, and should Mrs. Crays venture to assert her rights the courts may be called upon to clucidate the matter.

A MARTHA WASHINGTON LUNCHEON. Mrs. S. T. Rorer in February Ladies' Home Jour-

Cover the table with a white cloth. In the centre place a mirror, on which stand a tail vase filled with red and white carnations. At one corner place a huge bow of blue and white ribbon. In this bow stand a dainty dinner lamp, of silver, glass, brass or copper. Have the light shielded by a fuffy scarlet paper shade. The almonds and olives in pretty glass dishes may also form a part of the table service. For this special occasion it would be well to use either plain white china or old Canton. In keeping with the title, a statuette of General or Lady Washington on a round bonbon box may be placed as a souvenir at the left of each plate at table.
